

Art in Bloom Returns to the North Carolina Museum of Art

Festival of art and flowers features floral masterpieces, demonstrations, and more

Raleigh, N.C.—The North Carolina Museum of Art will host its second Art in Bloom, a four-day festival of art and flowers, in April 2016. The event features 56 floral masterpieces inspired by the NCMA’s permanent collection and created by world-class floral designers—11 more designs than last year’s festival. Art in Bloom also includes master classes, floral demonstrations, and presentations by internationally renowned floral artists, designers, local florist owners, and lecturers.

“After last year’s successful launch of Art in Bloom, we are thrilled to host this flower-filled festival for our visitors once again,” says NCMA Director Lawrence J. Wheeler. “This year we have exciting new speakers, a different group of creative and talented floral designers, and even more works of art to be interpreted as beautiful floral arrangements. It will be the perfect event with which to welcome spring.”

In addition to floral arrangements on view in the Museum’s permanent collection galleries, Art in Bloom includes:

- Presentations by Olivier Giugni, David Beahm, Julieta Sherk, Ashley Woodson Bailey, Erica Anderson, the American Institute of Floral Designers, and more (see below for more information on presenters)
- Demonstrations, including one by the Triangle Bonsai Society
- Master classes by Olivier Giugni, David Beahm, and Ashley Woodson Bailey (lunch with the designer included; limited admission)
- Workshops by the Triangle Bonsai Society and papermaker Ann Marie Kennedy
- Children’s and family-friendly activities, including a scavenger hunt, origami and paper flower making, and family tours
- Floral merchandise and trunk shows at the Museum Store
- Opening champagne reception where visitors can meet the floral designers featured in Art in Bloom

- Event designer David Beahm, who has designed events for the Discovery Channel, Victoria's Secret Beauty, Christian Dior, Louis Vuitton, and more; and who has been featured in The New York Times, New York Magazine, Town and Country, and Style
