

North Carolina and National Appraisal Organizations and Resources

These local and national appraisal organizations will appraise works of art for a fee. For those who would like to conduct their own research, we have also provided information about several resources available online.

The North Carolina Museum of Art sta! does not make financial appraisals of works of art, written or oral. The appraisers on this list have made themselves known to the Museum as willing to appraise works of art, but the Museum sta! is not able to verify their expertise. This list is not an endorsement of these particular appraisers, or a guarantee of the accuracy of their work.

Persons wishing to have works of art appraised are advised to contact one or more of these appraisers, and to discuss how the appraisal is to be done and what it will cost before they commit themselves to getting an appraisal.

Auction House Websites

Not as useful as the resources listed above for valuation purposes. Most allow you to search auction results for the past year or more, but the results are listed by lot number only. Lot numbers can be found in sale catalogues, but only catalogues of current sales can be searched online.
