Brand Strategy
From the Director

At the North Carolina Museum of Art, we believe in the power of art and how it can connect communities.

Our Museum is situated to provide North Carolina residents and visitors alike with experiences unique to its campus in Raleigh—one of a handful of museums in the world with a renowned art collection and an immense park housing art installations inspired by nature. But our work doesn't stop in the state's capital. Through programs, partnerships, and education initiatives, we work to bring the People's Collection to all 100 counties across North Carolina.

We know that many visitors first encounter the NCMA through these off-site experiences, online through our website or a social media post, or through word of mouth by a friend or family member. To clearly and concisely communicate our message and instill a sense of ownership in the People's Collection, we have created these branding guidelines, which are vital to this work. I hope you’ll join us in our efforts to be a cultural resource that reflects the communities we serve.

Valerie Hillings

Director, North Carolina Museum of Art
Purpose and Approach

In 2019, under Director Valerie Hillings, the Museum set forth an ambitious five-year strategic plan, with a focus on reframing its free Museum collection and expanding the Museum Park’s art experiences. Developed in concert with the strategic plan, this updated brand identity was released in 2022 after two years of research by a cross-departmental committee of staff and six months of design conception by NCMA graphic designers.

These resulting guidelines outline the Museum’s voice and visual identity to inform Museum communications and design, work in concert with Museum exhibition and gallery installations, and support in-person interactions with the public, partners, and potential visitors, signaling a sense of welcoming and belonging on our campus.

Please contact the Marketing and Communications Department for more specific guidance on visual identity and house style.
Mission and Vision

Mission

Collaboration. We collaborate to share diverse narratives and experiences that influence and inspire individuals and the communities we serve.

Creativity. We believe that being open to new ideas and perspectives expands our creativity and problem solving.
Museum Voice

When developing content across programming, events, social media, presentations, and beyond, keep these tenets in mind.

The North Carolina Museum of Art is

- Unexpected and unforgettable
- Local yet global
- Cool yet friendly

Our brand and voice:

- Acknowledge the Museum’s main differentiating factor, its large and varied indoor/outdoor campus experience
- Enable visitors to feel ownership, pride, and a sense of communal belonging
- Capitalize on the NCMA’s standing as a state art museum with national and global connections
- Celebrate North Carolina and its creative community
- Embrace history while moving toward the future
- Overcome stereotypes of museums as exclusive, elite, and solely academic
Accessibility and Inclusion

The Museum works to be accessible to everyone, including in its visual design and written communications. The new Museum brand was developed with this in mind, incorporating accessible typefaces and high-contrast colors to be used across Museum communications, including the website, printed collateral, social media posts, video and audio content, and email marketing.

Some of these efforts include:

- Hyperlegible, high-contrast fonts and colors for easy readability
- Alt text and descriptive captions for images on social media, email marketing, and the website
- Captioned video and audio content
- Accessibility icons on printed materials and web event listings to alert visitors to accessible areas and resources on campus
- Accessibility newsletter distributed monthly

Visual Identity
The iconic rings of Gyre by Thomas Sayre visually encapsulate the Museum’s sweeping indoor and outdoor collection and unique intersection of art, nature, and people. As a groundbreaking, seminal commission in 1999 for the developing Museum Park, Gyre is by the hand of a North Carolina artist with international recognition.

Inspired by Sayre’s gestural sketches created during the planning of his first public earthcasting sculpture, this visual mark evokes volume, forward motion, and a distinct sense of place. The textured gestural mark calls to mind the act of sketching or painting. These elements come together to represent experiences in both the Park and galleries that extend across the state of North Carolina.
Logo

Logo can be displayed in these three color themes.

There are two sets of logos: regular and stacked.
Logo

LOGO CLEARSPACE
The logo clearspace is the height of the uppercase letters in the logotype. Only the street address can violate the logo clearspace.

ADDRESS BLOCK
The logo clearspace may be encroached upon for the Museum address block only.
NCMA “subbrands” are used to visually identify certain Museum programs as a subset of the main Museum brand. Development and deployment of these subbrands must be done in conjunction with the Marketing and Communications Department.

Subbrand logos use NCMA in Case Text Light with the name of the program in Case Text Bold. Visually, subbrand logos are always all caps but should be written out in running text as two words (e.g., NCMA Learn). The name of the subbrand must be one word or an acronym.

Color Palette

 COLORS

The color palette is inspired by the wide range of art and nature on the NCMA campus. Individual designs utilize analogous triads (three colors next to each other on the color wheel) and analogous pairs (two colors next to each other) with a complementary color across the color wheel.
In exhibition design the neutral palette serves as a backdrop of colors in the galleries that enhance the visitor experience without distracting from the artwork.

In marketing materials the neutral palette is a subtle complement to the brighter primary brand color, NCMA Orange.

Typography

PRIMARY TYPEFACE

Case is a 21st-century typeface in three optical sizes, ideal for logos and display text; the Text family is perfectly crafted for the printed page; and the Micro family offers readability at small sizes. The latter two feature a higher x height alongside more open shapes; for maximum readability Micro also offers traits that make characters more easily distinguishable and enhanced contrast at the joints of stems and bows.

The letter forms of Case were used in the development of the wordmark:

North Carolina Museum of Art

Case should be used as the typeface for Museum publications in most instances, unless context or need for variety require a serif font, in which instance the secondary typeface may be utilized.

Primary System Font

Arial is the primary system font. It should be used in place of Case when a sans serif font is preferred and brand fonts are unavailable, such as in PowerPoint and Microsoft Word.

SECONDARY TYPEFACE

Flecha is a sharp and streamlined old-style typeface made for editorial design and text. On the whole Flecha has a sturdy and mechanized appearance with its rigid letter forms, square terminals, and geometrically simplified strokes. Nevertheless, Flecha still manages to be delicate and reminiscent of the broad nib pen.

The typeface Flecha should be used whenever a need for a serif face arises as well as for contrast with the primary typeface. Flecha is excellent as a header face for program promotions such as food service, membership, and education.

Flecha was chosen for its strong display qualities as well as its satisfying letter form relationship with the primary typeface, Case.

Secondary System Font

Times New Roman is the secondary system font. It should be used in place of Flecha when a serif font is preferred and brand fonts are unavailable, such as in PowerPoint and Microsoft Word.

Design Elements

LOGOMARK AS GRAPHIC ELEMENT
The logomark may be used as a graphic element. It may be rotated or reflected. It may overlap with text and images. The wordmark should not be used as a graphic element.

GYRE TEXTURE BRUSHES
A set of Adobe Illustrator brushes were created to mimic the logo and the texture of Thomas Sayre’s Gyre. These brushes may be used to create textural elements such as edges of a color field or in erasing an area. They should not be used to write text or draw illustrations.
Design Elements

PHOTOGRAPHY
Photography can be combined with design elements such as the Gyre texture brushes to create unique branded images.

FRAMING
A white frame around both print and digital materials can be used as a design element. Two frame styles are available.
